[] There were approximately 15 aircraft scattered in the area. [] most of these aircraft were single-engine fighters painted green. Others were U-2-type trainers painted white; three or four unidentified aircraft were covered with tarpaulin. On the other side of the railroad track, about 500m away, there was one small building, probably of stone, with one mast or antenna, of unknown height, mounted on the roof. The mast was supported by several cables imbedded in the ground. Several soldiers were seen in the vicinity of this house. [] no runways and [] the surface of the field was dirt; the field was not fenced or visibly guarded.
